Case No.: 14-CV-414 JLS (DHB)

ORDER GRANTING DEFENDANT’S MOTION TO DISMISS

(ECF No. 35)

20 Presently before the Court is Defendant Dr. Straga’s Motion to Dismiss First 21 Amended Complaint, (“MTD,” ECF No. 35). Also before the Court are Plaintiff David 22 Codell Pride Jr.’s Response in Opposition to, (“Opp’n,” ECF No. 36), and Defendant’s 23 Reply in Support of, (“Reply,” ECF No. 37), Defendant’s MTD. The Court vacated the 24 hearing on the motion and took the matter under submission pursuant to Civil Local Rule 25 7.1(d)(1). (ECF No. 40.) After considering the parties’ arguments and the law, the Court
26 GRANTS Defendant’s MTD and DISMISSES WITHOUT PREJUDICE Plaintiff’s 27 First Amended Complaint.
28

1 BACKGROUND

2 Plaintiff is currently an inmate at Richard J. Donovan Correctional Facility in 3 California. (First Am. Compl. (“FAC”) 1,¹ ECF No. 6.) The events underlying this claim 4 occurred while Plaintiff was an inmate at Calipatria State Prison (“CSP”), also in 5 California. (Id.) In 2009, Plaintiff was taking Tramadol prescribed to him by his primary 6 care physician at CSP for chronic knee, neck, back, and shoulder pain. (Id. at 3.) On 7 February 24, 2009, Plaintiff was taken off Tramadol and prescribed Neurontin by 8 Defendant, a neurologist named Dr. Straga. (Id. at 4.)

9 Before taking Neurontin, Plaintiff signed a consent form and asked Dr. Straga about 10 the side effects, to which Dr. Straga replied that drowsiness is a side effect. (Id.) Dr. Straga 11 did not inquire into Plaintiff’s family medical history before prescribing Neurontin. (Id. at 12 6.) After the initial appointment in February 2009, Dr. Straga saw Plaintiff three more times 13 spanning 2009 to 2011, with the final appointment occurring in March 2011. (Id. at 27– 14 34.) Plaintiff informed Dr. Straga multiple times during these visits that the Neurontin was 15 not relieving his chronic pain. (Id. at 4.) Dr. Straga administered other medications such as 16 oral steroids and performed additional procedures such as trigger-point injections to relieve 17 the pain. (Id. at 29–30.)

18 In addition, Plaintiff states that he suffered “severe” side effects from the Neurontin 19 treatment, including stomach pain and discomfort, a rash on his face, breathing problems, 20 anxiety and depression, thoughts of suicide, numbness in his face, swollen limbs, vision 21 problems, and dizziness. (Id. at 10–11.) Dr. Straga provided medications to relieve such 22 side effects, including benzoyl peroxide, Ranitidine, and inhalers. (Id. at 11.)

23 At some point while Plaintiff was taking Neurontin, Dr. Straga prescribed him 24 Robaxin, which Plaintiff then started taking in conjunction with Neurontin. (Id. at 4.) At 25 Plaintiff’s second appointment with Dr. Straga, the doctor noted that Plaintiff could not 26

27
28

1 tolerate Neurontin anymore due to the swelling of his limbs. (Id. at 29.) Dr. Straga’s notes 2 from the third appointment, which occurred one month after the second appointment, state 3 Plaintiff was taken off Neurontin because of the swelling side effect and was prescribed 4 Pamelor in its place. (Id. at 31.)

5 Over the course of 2010 Plaintiff was offered electromyograms (“EMG”) and nerve 6 conduction studies (“NCS”), which he refused. (Id. at 29.) At Plaintiff’s third visit with Dr.
7 Straga, the doctor referred him for a neurosurgery consultation. (Id. at 31.) Plaintiff now 8 brings claims under 42 U.S.C. § 1983 alleging that Defendant violated his Eighth and 9 Fourteenth Amendment rights, as well as committed an assault against Plaintiff. (Id. at 6– 10 7.)

11 LEGAL STANDARD

12 Federal Rule of Civil Procedure 12(b)(6) permits a party to raise by motion the 13 defense that the complaint “fail[s] to state a claim upon which relief can be granted,” 14 generally referred to as a motion to dismiss. The Court evaluates whether a complaint states 15 a cognizable legal theory and sufficient facts in light of Federal Rule of Civil Procedure 16 8(a), which requires a “short and plain statement of the claim showing that the pleader is 17 entitled to relief.” Although Rule 8 “does not require ‘detailed factual allegations,’ . . . it 18 [does] demand more than an unadorned, the-defendant-unlawfully-harmed-me 19 accusation.” Ashcroft v. Iqbal, 556 U.S. 662, 678 (2009) (quoting Bell Atl. Corp. v.
20 Twombly, 550 U.S. 544, 555 (2007)). In other words, “a plaintiff’s obligation to provide 21 the ‘grounds’ of his ‘entitle[ment] to relief’ requires more than labels and conclusions, and 22 a formulaic recitation of the elements of a cause of action will not do.” Twombly, 550 U.S.
23 at 555 (citing Papasan v. Allain, 478 U.S. 265, 286 (1986)). A complaint will not suffice 24 “if it tenders ‘naked assertion[s]’ devoid of ‘further factual enhancement.’” Iqbal, 556 U.S.
25 at 677 (citing Twombly, 550 U.S. at 557).

26 In order to survive a motion to dismiss, “a complaint must contain sufficient factual 27 matter, accepted as true, to ‘state a claim to relief that is plausible on its face.’” Id. (quoting 28 Twombly, 550 U.S. at 570); see also Fed. R. Civ. P. 12(b)(6). A claim is facially plausible

1 when the facts pled “allow the court to draw the reasonable inference that the defendant is 2 liable for the misconduct alleged.” Iqbal, 556 U.S. at 677 (citing Twombly, 550 U.S. at 3 556). That is not to say that the claim must be probable, but there must be “more than a 4 sheer possibility that a defendant has acted unlawfully.” Id. Facts “‘merely consistent with’
5 a defendant’s liability” fall short of a plausible entitlement to relief. Id. (quoting Twombly, 6 550 U.S. at 557). Further, the Court need not accept as true “legal conclusions” contained 7 in the complaint. Id. This review requires context-specific analysis involving the Court’s 8 “judicial experience and common sense.” Id. at 679 (citation omitted). “[W]here the well-9 pleaded facts do not permit the court to infer more than the mere possibility of misconduct, 10 the complaint has alleged—but it has not ‘show[n]’—‘that the pleader is entitled to relief.’” 11 Id.

12 In the wake of the heightened pleading standard announced in Twombly and affirmed 13 in Iqbal, the Court remains obligated, “where the petitioner is pro se, particularly in civil 14 rights cases, to construe the pleadings liberally and to afford the petitioner the benefit of 15 any doubt.” Hebbe v. Pliler, 627 F.3d 338, 342 (9th Cir. 2010) (quoting Bretz v. Kelman, 16 773 F.2d 1026, 1027 n.1 (9th Cir. 1985) (en banc)). However, the Court may not “supply 17 essential elements of claims that were not initially pled.” Ivey v. Bd. of Regents of the Univ.
18 of Alaska, 673 F.2d 266, 268 (9th Cir. 1982). And “vague and conclusory allegations of 19 official participation in civil rights violations” are not “sufficient to withstand a motion to 20 dismiss.” Id.

21 Where a complaint does not survive 12(b)(6) analysis, the Court will grant leave to 22 amend unless it determines that no modified contention “consistent with the challenged 23 pleading . . . [will] cure the deficiency.” DeSoto v. Yellow Freight Sys., Inc., 957 F.2d 655, 24 658 (9th Cir. 1992) (quoting Schriber Distrib. Co. v. Serv-Well Furniture Co., 806 F.2d 25 1393, 1401 (9th Cir. 1986)).

ANALYSIS

Judge Marilyn L. Huff dismissed Plaintiff's Original Complaint (ECF No. 1) with leave to amend, (ECF No. 3), on the grounds that his § 1983 claim was time-barred.² Plaintiff filed a First Amended Complaint which Defendant now moves to dismiss under Federal Rule of Civil Procedure 12(b)(6) on the grounds that a difference in medical opinion between a patient and his doctor cannot support a claim for deliberate indifference under the Eighth Amendment. (MTD 4.) The Court considers the statute of limitations issue and the substantive Eighth Amendment claim in turn.

I. Statute of Limitations

Granting a motion to dismiss for failure to state a claim is proper if the cause of action is time-barred by a statute of limitations. Cervantes v. City of San Diego, 5 F.3d 1273, 1275 (9th Cir. 1993). Because § 1983 lacks a statute of limitations, the Court applies the statute of limitations for personal injury actions of the forum state, which, in California's case, is two years. Canatella v. Van De Kamp, 486 F.3d 1128, 1132 (9th Cir. 2007); Cal. Code of Civ. Proc. § 335.1.

Federal law, applying common law tort principles for a §1983 claim, dictates that the statute of limitations commences at the accrual date of the § 1983 claim. Wallace v. Kato, 549 U.S. 384, 388 (2007). A cause of action accrues when the "plaintiff knows or has reason to know of the injury which is the basis of the action." Knox v. Davis, 260 F.3d 1009, 1013 (9th Cir. 2001) (quoting TwoRivers v. Lewis, 174 F.3d 987, 992 (9th Cir. 1999)).

A statute of limitations may be equitably tolled per the forum state's rules. Fink v. Shedler, 192 F.3d 911, 916 (9th Cir. 1999). In California, equitable tolling occurs only if the plaintiff meets three conditions: "(1) defendant must have had timely notice of the claim; (2) defendant must not be prejudiced by being required to defend the otherwise barred claim; and (3) plaintiff's conduct must have been reasonable and in good faith." Id.

² This case was reassigned from Judge Huff to the undersigned on March 6, 2017. (ECF No. 34.)

1 (quoting Bacon v. City of L.A., 843 F.2d 372, 374 (9th Cir. 1988)).

2 Plaintiff does not dispute that, but for equitable tolling, his claim would be barred 3 by the two year statute of limitations. Plaintiff first met with Defendant Dr. Straga and was 4 first prescribed Neurontin in February 2009. (FAC 27.) Plaintiff likely became aware of 5 the injury giving rise to this action in “late 2010” when a nurse at the prison noticed his 6 swollen hands and suggested his ailment might be a side effect of Neurontin. (Id. at 5.) By 7 March 2011, Plaintiff had his final interaction with Dr. Straga. (Id. at 33.) Though Plaintiff 8 likely knew of his injury as early as 2009, he certainly had reason to know of his injury by 9 his last appointment in March 2011. Accordingly, and drawing the favorable inference that 10 Plaintiff did not have reason to know until the latest plausible date, the § 1983 claim must 11 have accrued by March 2011. The statute of limitations therefore ran by March 2013, a 12 year before Plaintiff filed his original complaint in February 2014.

13 The Order dismissing Plaintiff’s original Complaint for failure to state a claim noted 14 Plaintiff did not allege facts supporting a claim for equitable tolling. (See ECF Nos. 3, 5.)
15 In his FAC, Plaintiff supplies such facts. Plaintiff notes he was required to comply with 44 16 U.S.C. § 1997e(a) (the “Prison Litigation Reform Act”), which states that a confined 17 prisoner must exhaust all administrative remedies before filing a § 1983 suit in federal 18 court. (FAC 24.) In due compliance, he commenced an administrative review in September 19 2012, which ended in August 2013. (Id.) He argues this eleven-month period should be 20 tolled. (Id.) Granting his argument and exempting this period, the statute of limitations
21 nevertheless ran from March 2011 to September 2012, and from August 2013 to February 22 2014, a total of twenty-four months. However, Plaintiff additionally argues he diligently 23 conducted a “fact-finding mission” to support his claims in the months preceding the filing 24 of his administrative claim and that therefore this time should also be excluded. (Id.) 25 Exempting these preceding months as well, the period of time for which the statute of 26 limitations has run no longer exceeds two years.

27 The Court agrees with Plaintiff that his seeking administrative review and 28 preparatory research were actions both reasonable and in good faith. Defendant nowhere

1 indicates that notice of the claim was not timely. And Defendant does not argue that tolling
2 the statute of limitations in this case will prejudice her defense. Taken together, Plaintiff's 3 case merits equitable tolling and therefore the Court concludes that his claim is not time-4 barred.

5 II. Eighth Amendment

6 An inmate has an Eighth Amendment right to adequate physical and mental health 7 care. Doty v. Cty. of Lassen, 37 F.3d 540, 546 (9th Cir. 1994). Deliberate indifference to 8 the serious medical needs of an inmate is inconsistent with the basic standards of human 9 decency and antithetical to the Eighth Amendment's proscription of "unnecessary and 10 wanton infliction of pain." Gregg v. Georgia, 428 U.S. 153, 173 (1976).

11 A determination of deliberate indifference to a serious medical need involves a two-12 step analysis consisting of both objective and subjective inquiries. Farmer v. Brennan, 511 13 U.S. 825, 837 (1994). First, the plaintiff must demonstrate a serious medical need such that 14 failure to provide treatment could "result in further significant injury" or "unnecessary and 15 wanton infliction of pain." Jett v. Penner, 439 F.3d 1091, 1096 (9th Cir. 2006) (quoting 16 Estelle v. Gamble, 429 U.S. 97, 104 (1976)). Second, the plaintiff must show that the 17 defendant's response to the medical need was deliberately indifferent. Id. (citing McGuckin 18 v. Smith, 974 F.2d 1050, 1059–60 (9th Cir. 1992)).

19 Deliberate indifference consists of (1) a purposeful act or failure to respond to a 20 prisoner's pain or possible medical need and (2) harm caused by the indifference. Id. Such 21 indifference may be manifested when "prison officials deny, delay[,] or intentionally 22 interfere with medical treatment, or it may be shown by the way in which prison physicians 23 provide medical care." Hutchinson v. United States, 838 F.2d 390, 394 (9th Cir. 1988).
24 This standard is one of subjective recklessness. Farmer, 511 U.S. at 839–40. "To satisfy 25 this subjective component of deliberate indifference, the inmate must show that prison 26 officials 'kn[e]w [] of and disregard[ed]' the substantial risk of harm, but the officials need 27 not have intended any harm to befall the inmate; 'it is enough that the official acted or 28 failed to act despite his knowledge of a substantial risk of serious harm.'" Lemire v. Cal.

1 Dep't of Corr. & Rehab., 726 F.3d 1062, 1074 (9th Cir. 2013) (alterations in original)
2 (quoting Farmer, 511 U.S. at 837, 842). “Deliberate indifference is a high legal standard.
3 A showing of medical malpractice or negligence is insufficient to establish a constitutional 4 deprivation under the Eighth Amendment.” Hamby v. Hammond, 821 F.3d 1085, 1092
5 (9th Cir. 2016) (quoting Toguchi v. Chung, 391 F.3d 1051, 1060 (9th Cir. 2004)); Estelle, 6 429 U.S. at 106.

7 Accepting his factual allegations as true, Plaintiff sufficiently pleads a serious 8 medical need. For one, Plaintiff alleges he suffered from chronic pain throughout his body, 9 bulging and ruptured discs, and nerve pain, among other maladies. (FAC 3.) Additionally, 10 Plaintiff sufficiently alleges serious harm from taking Neurontin to treat that chronic pain, 11 including a rash, swollen limbs, and vision problems. (FAC 5.)

12 But Plaintiff fails to adequately allege that Defendant was deliberately indifferent to 13 that serious medical need. Specifically, Defendant argues Plaintiff fails to state a claim 14 under the first prong of the subjective step—that Defendant knew of a substantial risk to 15 Plaintiff and deliberately disregarded it—because (1) Plaintiff merely alleges a difference
16 of medical opinion between himself and Defendant, and (2) because Defendant’s 17 prescribed treatment was not experimental but rather medically acceptable under the 18 circumstances. (See generally Reply.)

19 The Court agrees with Defendant. To be sure, Plaintiff pleads five factual allegations 20 supporting his argument that Defendant was deliberately indifferent to his serious medical 21 needs. But neither is entirely persuasive, as the Court explains below.

22 A. Alleged Failure to Inquire into Plaintiff’s Family History

23 First, Plaintiff alleges that the Defendant’s failure to inquire into his family history 24 of “heart, lung, and eyesight problems (glacoma)[sic]; diabete[sic]; [and] brain tumors”
25 before prescribing Neurontin amounts to deliberate indifference. (FAC 11.)

26 The Court disagrees that this, on its own, amounts to deliberate indifference.
27 Specifically, there must “be a conscious disregard of a serious risk of harm for deliberate 28 indifference to exist.” Toguchi, 391 F.3d at 1059 (emphasis in original). In Toguchi, for

1 example, the defendant doctor allegedly prescribed medication without first assessing 2 Plaintiff's medical condition and potential to suffer adverse side effects. Id. The allegation 3 amounted to mere medical negligence and therefore failed to state a claim of deliberate 4 indifference. See id. (affirming grant of defendant's motion for summary judgment).

5 In the present case, the failure to inquire into Plaintiff's family history is like the 6 failure to fully examine the patient in Toguchi. Although both failures might be construed 7 as medical malpractice, that is insufficient to support a claim for deliberate indifference.

8 B. Failure to Exhaustively Discuss with Plaintiff the Potential Side Effects of 9 Neurontin, Prescribed Either Alone or in Conjunction with Robaxin

10 Second, Plaintiff alleges that Defendant "deliberately mislead [sic] Plaintiff about 11 the dangerous side effects of [Neurontin]." (FAC 6.) However, this is a conclusory 12 allegation and therefore need not be taken as true. Iqbal, 556 U.S. at 677. No facts plausibly 13 support the claim that Defendant deliberately misled Plaintiff. To the contrary, Plaintiff 14 notes that he asked about the side effects of Neurontin and Defendant replied that one side 15 effect is drowsiness. (FAC 4.) The only facts pled in support of the claim that Defendant 16 deliberately misled Plaintiff are in Exhibit D, which in Plaintiff's words are "examples of 17 what a physician should so inform a patient." (FAC 9.) But even taking Plaintiff's 18 conclusion as true that standard medical practice for prescribing Neurontin is to discuss 19 more side effects than just drowsiness,³ Defendant's failure to do so is—at best—a breach 20 of duty amounting to possible medical malpractice. And under Hamby and Toguchi, each 21 of these allegations is insufficient to state a claim of deliberate indifference because each 22 alleges medical negligence.

23 C. The Change from Tramadol to Neurontin in Plaintiff's Treatment Plan

24 Third, Plaintiff alleges Dr. Straga discontinued Tramadol in favor of Neurontin for 25 (1) reasons related to cost and (2) because too many other prisoners were requesting 26

27
28 ³ In addition to the claim that Defendant did not fully discuss all side effects of Neurontin, Plaintiff alleges Defendant failed to discuss possible side-effect synergies between Neurontin and Robaxin. (Opp'n 16.)

1 Tramadol. (FAC 7.) He alleges deliberate indifference because Defendant “interfered with 2 Plaintiff’s already prescribed medical treatment which was effective in treating Plaintiff’s 3 pain with no side-effects.” (Id.)

4 The choice to pursue one treatment among alternatives may support a deliberate 5 indifference claim if the elected course of treatment “was medically unacceptable under 6 the circumstances” and was chosen in “conscious disregard of an excessive risk to the 7 prisoner’s health.” Jackson v. McIntosh, 90 F.3d 330, 332 (9th Cir. 1996) (declining to 8 grant summary judgment for doctors where Plaintiff alleged they denied him a kidney 9 transplant out of personal animosity). However, as discussed, a mere difference of medical 10 opinion regarding alternate courses of treatment between the doctor and the patient may 11 not support a claim of deliberate indifference. Id.

12 Here, Plaintiff cites no authority suggesting that changing a prescription for non-13 medical reasons in itself makes the treatment medically unacceptable under the 14 circumstances or may otherwise support a claim of deliberate indifference. Nor does 15 Plaintiff cite authority suggesting that failure to provide a particular medication among 16 acceptable alternatives may suffice to state a claim for deliberate indifference. The crux of 17 Plaintiff’s complaint is that Defendant substituted one drug for a drug Plaintiff felt was 18 “ideal for his condition.” (Id. at 9.) Plaintiff’s belief that one drug was better is non-19 actionable under the Eighth Amendment.

20 Plaintiff relies on Estelle, 429 U.S. at 105, for the proposition that when a prison 21 official “intentionally interferes” with an already prescribed treatment he may be held 22 deliberately indifferent. (Opp’n 10.) And he relies on Hamilton v. Endell, 981 F.2d 1062, 23 1067 (9th Cir. 1992), for the proposition that treating a patient based on a medical opinion 24 “a reasonable person would likely determine to be inferior” may support a deliberate 25 indifference claim. (Opp’n 12.)

26 Estelle is inapposite. Here, Defendant replaced one treatment with another treatment.
27 Nothing in Estelle suggests that once a treatment is prescribed it may never be changed.
28 Additionally, Plaintiff mischaracterizes Hamilton by failing to provide relevant context. In 1 Hamilton, Plaintiff alleged that prison officials in bad faith sought a medical opinion from 2 a doctor who had never examined the patient-prisoner in order to justify moving Plaintiff

3 from one facility to another, in direct conflict with Plaintiff’s examining physician’s order 4 that Plaintiff not be moved. 981 F.2d at 1067. The reasonable person standard in Hamilton
5 refers to what a reasonable prison official would believe to be a constitutional violation 6 under qualified immunity doctrine—seeking an opinion in bad faith from a doctor who had 7 never examined the patient could be unreasonable, for example. Id. The standard does not 8 apply to a prison doctor, who has examined the patient, as in this case, and acts according 9 to her own medical opinion. Thus, these authorities do not support Plaintiff’s claim.

10 D. Prescribing Neurontin Despite Supposed Evidence that Neurontin Is Not 11 Efficacious for Treating Plaintiff’s Ailment

12 Fourth, Plaintiff argues that prescribing Neurontin amounted to “no treatment at all” 13 because the court In re Neurontin Mktg. & Sales Practices Litig. (Kaiser Findings), No.
14 04-cv-10739-PBS, 2011 WL 3852254 (D. Mass. Aug. 31, 2011), ruled that Neurontin is 15 not effective at relieving nerve pain. (Opp’n 17.) The Court agrees with Defendant that 16 Plaintiff mischaracterizes that case. The case concerned Pfizer’s fraudulent marketing of 17 Neurontin for off-label uses; it did not concern allegations that Neurontin was sold contrary 18 to FDA rulings deeming it either dangerous or inefficacious for treating nerve pain in 19 general. Nor does Plaintiff provide citations to such rulings. (See generally Pl. Obj. to Def.
20 Reply (“Obj.”), ECF No. 42.)

21 However, even accepting Plaintiff’s allegation as true that Neurontin did not and 22 could not possibly work to relieve his symptoms, he still fails to state a claim for deliberate 23 indifference. At Plaintiff’s first appointment after being prescribed Neurontin, Defendant 24 noted that Plaintiff believed the Neurontin was not working, and, in response, suggested 25 Effexor and eventually prescribed Pamelor. (FAC 31.) Defendant also performed trigger-26 point injections to relieve nerve pain. (Id.) Moreover, before Defendant prescribed Plaintiff 27 Neurontin, she attempted to treat him with “Tylenol 3 with Codeine.” (Obj. 7.) Plaintiff 28 does not allege that Defendant failed to treat him, but instead merely alleges one drug in a

1 string of attempts to treat him was not FDA-approved. This does not support a claim of 2 deliberate indifference.

3 E. Alleged Failure to Treat Plaintiff's Side Effects Caused by Neurontin

4 Finally, Plaintiff states that “Dr. Straga discontinue [sic] the neurontin treatment 5 because nurse Matthews requested the name of the Dr. who prescribed the drug and 6 reported I needed to be taken off neurontin” after the nurse allegedly noticed Plaintiff’s 7 swollen hands. (Opp’n 8.) He further states that he “experienced other side-effects which 8 [he] received treatment for, but, was not so informed were due to Neurontin.” (FAC 11.) 9 Plaintiff does not allege that Defendant was aware of a substantial risk to Plaintiff and 10 consciously disregarded it. To the contrary, Plaintiff’s own statement suggests that once 11 Defendant was made aware of Plaintiff’s side effects she took him off Neurontin.
12 Moreover, Defendant noted Plaintiff’s discomfort with Neurontin and prescribed several 13 medications to alleviate the side effects. (FAC 11, 27–34.) Thus, based on his own 14 allegations, Plaintiff fails to state a claim that Defendant’s deliberate indifference caused 15 him to wantonly suffer from the side effects of Neurontin. Accordingly, the Court 16 GRANTS Defendant’s MTD (ECF No. 35).

17 CONCLUSION

18 For the reasons stated above, the Court GRANTS Defendant’s MTD (ECF No. 35).
19 While the Court harbors serious doubts concerning Plaintiff’s ability to adequately re-plead 20 these claims against Defendant, the Court will allow Plaintiff another opportunity to amend 21 his Complaint. Accordingly, the Court DISMISSES WITHOUT PREJUDICE Plaintiff’s 22 claims against Defendant. Plaintiff SHALL FILE an amended complaint, if any, on or
